SWEET BRIAR COLLEGE
SWEET BRIAR, VIRGINIA

FORWARD

The 1980 Briar Patch is the culmination of the efforts and late nights of some very dedicated people, without whose help this book would never have gone to press. This year's yearbook staff has tried to present many of the activities of the student body, faculty, and friends that made the 1979-1980 year one of inspiration, hard work and good times — after all, what else is there? Of course through life we may not always be as inspired as we have been here, but let's hope that the good times will lead us to where our hearts really need to be — if they won't lead us — we surely hope they'll follow us! Thank-you Charlie and Mike our representative and photographer. A special thanks to Susan Rowat for her work on the student photography. Thanks Florence — you were always there when I needed you. Enough of this! Look through and enjoy.

CLOSING COMMENTS

There are many sides of Sweet Briar that this book cannot cover in pictures. The pictures will remind you of your friends and perhaps some of the good times but not all of them.

Maybe this is not a good time, but remember the all-nighters you pulled alone or with a friend trying to keep each other awake. Then at four o'clock in the morning, running down to Mother Macke's with a pocket full of change (not wanting to chance the dollar changer not working) and buying all kinds of junk. Sitting at breakfast the next morning ready to fall asleep and promising yourself that the next test you'll study ahead of time . . . Having a week where all you can see is mid-terms and the weekend seems years away. When it finally does come, you're ready to get out and forget about work until Monday . . . Waking up to the nine o'clock bell that tells you that you're supposed to be in Guion . . . Not going to class because the snow is entirely too deep, yet being able to make it to the parties that night because the roads are miraculously clear . . . The hour long car rides to the parties and how fast they went. How the ride home seemed like it was five minutes, because if you weren't the driver, there's a good chance you slept the entire way or you were awake eating food you bought at the 7-11 or Hopin . . . Listening to guys tell you that all Sweet Briar girls wanted to do was get married and how you would say "That's not true," and how you would think "If it were, I sure as hell wouldn't marry you, jerk!" . . . Meeting a boy at a party, dancing with him and hoping that he'll call. If he does, — great. If he doesn't, you plan your strategy. The next time you see him, you'll act like he's not worth two cents. You plan what you will say to him, how you will come back with some funny remark everytime. If you talk to his friends, you're careful about what you say because there's a chance it will get back to him. You let him see you talking to other guys to bruise his ego. But no matter how hard you plan when you see him you're tongue tied and you come back to Sweet Briar thinking you acted pretty stupid when you really didn't. Then you ask yourself, "Why aren't boys like this?" . . . Finding out that your ride back to Sweet Briar left twenty minutes ago . . . The knot you get in your stomach right before you call a boy for a big weekend and if he says yes, how relieved you are, and if he says no how mad you get and swear that if he ever calls you, you'll be busy . . . How different the dancing and music were when you first came and getting an upperclassmen to teach you how to shag . . . Wanting to kill the upperclassmen who told you that Sweet Briar got easier as you went along . . . Sitting around the hall talking 'till the wee hours of the morning about e-v-e-r-y-t-h-i-n-g . . . Living in an old dorm, taking a shower, screaming, swearing, and wondering why some people can't learn to yell flushing . . . How close everybody on the hall grows by the end of the year and how you wish you could have the same people on the hall next year . . . Talking to your best friend from high school on the phone for an hour and when the phone bill comes you don't care because it was worth it . . . Wondering who set your alarm clock for three o'clock in the morning and realizing that it's the fire alarm . . . There really being fire when the alarm went off . . . Wondering why they serve liver when they know everybody hates it, then deciding that they must have some kind of deal worked out with the Bistro . . . Swearing up and down that you won't open a charge account at the Bistro or the Bookshop and then finding a bill in your box for $40.00 . . . Spending your afternoons sunbathing but stopping everything at three to watch General Hospital . . . Cancelling the walk up to Monument Hill because of the snow. Having a speaker come to talk about energy, and the school wanting to honor him, "shuts off the power." — October 10, 1979 . . . Having Security call you at eight o'clock in the morning, telling you to move your car . . . The feeling of terror when you drove into the gates of Sweet Briar for the first time freshmen year, and how you wanted to turn around and go back home

. . . Walking into the Bistro for the first time and seeing your class banner hanging there and waiting for the day when it will hang over the fireplace . . . Going to your first meal and realizing that college meals aren't as bad as everyone says . . . Putting a spoon full of cereal in your mouth only to find that the cows have been eating onion grass . . . Those awful I.D. pictures . . . Spending your allowance money at the beginning of the month like it's going out of style and then living on a very tight budget until the next check comes . . . Practically buying out Kings and saving those green stamps . . . After a wild night of partying, deciding that your health is more important than your work and going back to bed . . . Orientation week . . . Hitching Post . . . Freshmen Show . . . Q V goodies . . . Junior Year Abroad . . . Junior Banquet . . . Fight for the stairs . . . Room Trashing . . . Senior Show . . . Ring Games . . . Lantern Bearing . . . Step Singing . . . Sweet Tones singing Christmas carols . . . Chung Mung Goodies . . . Bum Chum Bazaar . . . Happy Hours . . . Boathouse parties . . . The Halloween Party . . . Fall, Winter, and Spring Weekends . . . WUDZ . . . Candle light dinners . . . Suitcase school . . . "Weekends are made by Sweet Briar Girls" . . . Washington & Lee, Virginia, Hampden-Sydney and V.M.I. . . . "Love a minority — kiss a preppie" . . . Information Center on Valentine's Day . . . Burnies . . . Finals . . . Senior comps . . . and finally — GRADUATION!!

Some of these might not be "good" times, but they are times you will look back on and laugh at — maybe not for a long while, but eventually you will. Not only are they fun experiences, some are experiences from which to learn, but then again Sweet Briar is a higher learning institution.

THAT'S ALL FOLKS!
